

Samara Weaver Professional Bio

Samara graduated with her master's in architecture in 2013 from Tyler School of Art and Architecture. After graduating Samara worked in Architecture, product design/development and Construction while continuing to develop her unique artistic voice using multiple mediums. In 2017 she took the leap to work for herself and started Design Hues, focusing on artisan floral and specializing in large floral installations. In 2018 Samara applied to the Juried Craft Show at The Delaware Art Museum and her 20-foot sculpture "Light and Air" was accepted into the show. Showing her work at the museum was a pivotal turning point in her artistic career, supporting shifting her focus to her art full time. In the Spring of 2020 Samara applied for an art studio at the Delaware Contemporary art museum and was accepted. Gaining this dedicated studio space surrounded by other working artists supported her working full time creating and selling her artwork, functional ceramics, and porcelain jewelry. To create a larger space to work and expand her artistic practice Samara moved her studio to her home in 2022. In 2024 Samara showed work at Winterthur Museum and Rockwood Museum. Samra continues to show and sell her artwork and create work for commercial contracts.
